THE PROBLEM

Good candidates lose interviews even when they have the right experience.

Vietnamese and foreign candidates often prepare vocabulary, but Korean-company interviews also judge reliability, teamwork, ownership, preparation, and trust.

01

Experience does not become evidence.

Strong work stories sound vague, generic, or unsupported.

02

Fluency is not the only signal.

Grammar tools improve sentences, not interview trust.

03

Company research stays unused.

Facts do not turn into role-specific answer strategy.

CORE INSIGHT

The gap is not English fluency. It is interview trust.

Most prep tools help candidates sound more fluent. Korean Interview Coach helps them sound more trustworthy by converting real work experience into clear, role-specific English answers.

A

Clear English

The product insight: do not teach candidates to “sound Korean.” Help them communicate professional evidence that a Korean-company interviewer can trust.

THE SOLUTION

One portable Agent Skill. One focused job: convert experience into trust.

Diagnose the weak signal, practice in English, and rewrite the answer around evidence, role fit, and Korean-company expectations.

- Vietnamese explanation
- English interview practice
- Trust-signal calibration

WHY THIS WINS

It wins because it is specific, demoable, and immediately useful.

Narrow wedge

Korean-company interview readiness, not generic career coaching.

Trust-first

Optimizes for evidence, ownership, teamwork, and preparation.

Language-realistic

Explain in Vietnamese, perform in English.

Demo-ready

Website, GitHub source, YouTube demo, and installable skill.

BEFORE

I worked hard with my team and solved the issue.

AFTER

I diagnosed the API timeout, aligned with QA, and shipped a low-risk fix first.

WHAT WE BUILT
