Question Why do you want to work with a Korean team?

THE PROBLEM

Good candidates fail for invisible reasons.

Vietnamese and foreign candidates often prepare vocabulary, but Korean-company interviews judge trust, evidence, and fit.

01

Clear enough is not interview-ready.

Long answers hide signal and make English harder to follow.

02

Ownership is miscalibrated.

Answers sound too passive or too arrogant.

03

Company prep stays generic.

Facts do not become role-specific interview strategy.

The gap is not English fluency. It is interview trust.

Korean employers often look for reliability, preparation, teamwork, respectful ownership, and clear communication. Foreign candidates need coaching that turns their real experience into those signals.

WHY THIS WINS

Built for a specific, painful interview gap.

Narrow loop

`kickoff -> company-prep -> practice -> feedback`.

Culture-aware

Useful Korean-company context without stereotypes.

Language-realistic

Explain in Vietnamese, perform in English.

Workflow, not prompt

State, rubric, references, and next-action feedback.

BEFORE

I worked hard with my team and solved the issue.

AFTER

I diagnosed the API timeout, aligned with QA, and shipped a low-risk fix first.

WHAT WE BUILT

Hackathon build: product behavior, not only UI.

Reusable skill + references + multilingual surface.

Agent skill

Kickoff, prep, practice, feedback
